Color Coating For Titanium Developed Here

An entirely new and efficient process to color titanium has been developed by Hi-Shear Corp., Torrance. The unique process coats titanium in brilliant and uniform colors without the use of harmful dyes or paints. Multi-colors can be applied to a single piece of titanium.

The process was conceived by William Greening, Hi-Shear's chief metallurgist, and Norman E. Clegg. The latter subsequently has been assigned to be project manager of the process.

The coloring process features two basic benefits to products. One is resistance to chemical corrosion while the other is the ability to remain color-fast to temperatures to 600 degrees F. and legible after extended exposure to 1000 degrees F. These two basic benefits make Hi-Shear's coloring process highly suitable for high temperature name plates and the color coding of fasteners, valves, nuclear reactor components as well as chemical pipes and fittings. Additionally, many commercial titanium products can be eye appealing as well as corrosive resistant. For instance, colored marine titanium hardware subjected to salt air would not require oiling nor would it pit or rust.

The novel Hi-Shear coating, when applied to titanium nuts and bolts, alleviates the galling condition normally encountered on male and female thread combinations.

Plans For 27 Classrooms Win Approval

Preliminary plans for 27 classroom additions at eight Torrance elementary schools were approved by the Torrance Board of Education Tuesday night. The facilities are expected to be ready next year.

Permanent additions are slated at Adams, Parkway, and Columbia Schools. Additions will include three classrooms and music room at Parkway, four classrooms and music rooms at Adams, and two classrooms at Columbia.

"Portable" units, which can be moved later if population shifts, are scheduled at five schools — two each at Magruder and Lincoln, three at Riviera, four at Hamilton, and four and a music room at Jefferson.

Cost of the projects is expected to be about $750,000. Construction will not begin until final plans are drawn and approved.

Bid for High School Rehabilitation Voted

A $28,863 bid for renovation and modernization of the Torrance High School heating system was awarded Tuesday night by the Torrance Board of Education.

The Leo Plumbing Co., low bidder, was awarded the contract for the modernization, which will include conversion from oil to gas. The system also will serve the new administration building for the school which will be built soon.
